Plants and seeds were donated from New Zealand and overseas sources with 57 of the 100 – 150 known species roses represented in the plantings. Further beds have been developed to allow plants to grow without restricting their growth habit. The garden was acknowledged as significant planting in 2005 from Heritage Roses New Zealand Inc." To the left of this text is a collage of seven photographs showing various rose bushes and garden paths. To the right is a grid of six close-up photographs of different rose flowers in various colors (white, pink, yellow, red). Below the grid is a link: "More photos on our Flickr Page...". At the bottom right is a social media widget for "New Zealand Rose So..." with "6,791 likes".
